

Indigenous Leadership for a Resilient Redwood Region

Shaping Our Region's Economic Future — Together

Leading the Way Forward

Tribal communities have cared for the Redwood Region since time immemorial, guided by deep ecological knowledge and a vision for the long term. Today, Tribes are leading some of the region's most promising economic growth — in land and water stewardship, clean energy, food systems, and community enterprise. As Tribal Lands and the counties of Del Norte, Humboldt, Lake, and Mendocino chart their path forward, the Tribal Table of Redwood Region RISE invites you to participate in what comes next.

Culture as a Living Foundation

This work is rooted in culture — a living tradition carried forward by elders, reflected in youth, and honored by the wider community. Cultural reclamation isn't separate from economic development — it's part of what makes this region's growth durable, and whole.

Collaboration Built on Trust

Trust, relationship, and shared objectives are the foundation Redwood Region RISE has built over three years — with Tribal leadership central to that success. Continued, culturally grounded partnership is essential to what's next.

The Tribal Table:

- Informs and shapes regional strategies rooted in Indigenous knowledge and priorities
- Connects Tribal and community leaders across the region
- Supports Tribal-led projects through resources for funding, technical assistance, and partnership
- Helps build lasting structure for a resilient Redwood Region
