ABOUT THIS PROJECT

This project was created in partnership with HSU's ITEPP and the HSU Social Work Department for the Masters of Social Work (MSW) Community Project. The goal of this project was to identify resources within Humboldt County that are available to support Native foster youth in transitioning to higher education and assess their strengths, challenges, and promising practices. Assessments were done in one-on-one conversations with community service providers.

THANK YOU

This project was possible thanks to guidance from ITEPP, the tribes, schools, and community service providers that made time to meet with us and share their perspective. We would also like to thank the Humboldt State University Social Work Department for their support and the CSU Basic Needs Grant for funding this project.

This project was created in partnership with The Indian Tribal & Educational Personnel Program (ITEPP). ITEPP's mission is to facilitate and promote academic success and self-efficacy for primarily Native American Indian students at Humboldt State University that validates tribal cultural values, political status and promotes the federal Indian policy of Indian Self-Determination.<sup>6</sup>

REGIONS

Interviews were conducted in three different regions throughout Humboldt County: Klamath Trinity & Adjacent areas, Northern Humboldt & Adjacent areas, Eureka City Schools & Adjacent areas.

A RELATIONAL WORLDVIEW

The relational worldview is based on seeing life as harmonious relationships. It is cyclical, intuitive, non-time oriented and fluid. A common illustration of the relational worldview is a circle, dissected into four quadrants that represent the four major interrelated forces of a person's life which need to be in balance to maintain health: context, the mind, the body and the spirit. Although local tribes use different terminology, the concept of a holistic approach to services for indigenous people, families and communities, are targeted toward the restoration of balance and with the understanding that problems reside in the relationships between factors. The relational worldview represents an ethical framework by which to work with and for Native foster youth, whose life circumstances are in an imbalance, making certain pathways, such as higher education, more difficult<sup>1</sup>.

METHODOLOGIES

We conducted qualitative interviews informed by Indigenous research methodologies, specifically the conversational method<sup>2</sup>. A set of questions were developed using the relational worldview to guide discussions with community agencies, focusing on the agency's role in supporting Native foster youth, collaborating with other agencies and suggestions for improvements in supporting Native foster youth. Through these conversations, we were able to collaborate on identifying the strengths and challenges in supporting Native foster youth toward higher education that exist in Humboldt County.

The Conversational Method:
Aligns with an Indigenous worldview that honours orality as means of transmitting knowledge and upholds the relational which is necessary to maintain a collectivist tradition. When used in an Indigenous framework, it should:

1. be linked to particular tribal knowledge and situated within an Indigenous paradigm;
2. relational;
3. purposeful (most often involving a decolonizing aim);
4. involve particular protocol as determined by Indigenous knowledge and/or place;
5. involves an informality and flexibility;
6. collaborative and dialogic; and
7. reflexive.<sup>2</sup>

Based on discussions with service providers, we identified the following themes...

Building Relationships with Native Foster Youth

Strengths

- * Providing one-on-one support and mentorship programs.
- * Strong Native American presence in institutional settings, such as Native American Clubs, Indian Education Programs, the Indian Action Council, representation with faculty and student populations and campus events geared toward Native foster youth.

Challenges

- * Supporting Native foster youth beyond academic and basic needs.
- * Addressing the stigma associated with the term "Foster Youth" in order to identify and engage youth in services.

Promising Practices

- * Targeted outreach, including of students who are not on the "college track."
- * Understand trauma-informed practices and creative ways to engage Native foster youth.
- * Empower Native foster youth identity formation.

Interagency Collaboration

Strengths

- * Humboldt County Office of Education provides strong support to school foster youth liaisons.
- * Data collection is consistently updated and MOUs exist for data sharing with other providers.
- * Existing connections between community agencies.

Challenges

- * Monitoring and tracking of academic and personal development (i.e. A-G requirements, event, attendance, etc.) and the independent access of data by some community agencies.
- * No formal relationship between K-12 education and higher education.
- * High turnover rates among staff at community agencies.
- * Coordination and collaboration between agencies/schools/tribes.

Promising Practices

- * Tracking participation in "cultivation of college interest" events and actively coordinating event dates around school schedules.
- * Share foster youth database with tribes and expand to include youth placed through Tribal Courts (respect tribes' right to share that information).
- * Hold multi-disciplinary team meetings to support Native foster youth.
- * Provide comprehensive trainings around supporting Native foster youth.

Provision and Accessing of Services

Strengths

- * Immediate availability of educational resources and supports when students are ready to seek support or identify interest in higher education or other programs
- * Assistance with financial aid eligibility for State, Federal, Native American, and others sources
- * The establishment and funding of new positions to provide direct support

Challenges

- * Supporting Native foster youth not on college track and/or at high risk of dropping out of school
- * Limited outreach and staff shortage
- * Barriers surrounding requirements to eligibility of services/resources
- * Geographical barriers

Promising Practices

- * Doing in person outreach specifically targeting N/A foster youth
- * Invite natural supports into dialogue with service providers
- * Knowledge of Tribal, federal and state policies and resources

RELEVANT LAWS

It is important to be aware of current federal, state, tribal, and local policies and legislation to better support Native foster youth who may benefit from those policies. These policies are meant to support school stability during youth's involvement with the foster system. Here are some examples:

ASSEMBLY BILL 490

Students in foster care must have access to the same academic resources, services, and extracurricular and enrichment activities that are available to all students.

AB 490 outlines the roles of the court, social workers, school districts, care providers, and advocates in supporting educational stability for foster youth. This law also defines the role of liaisons that must be designated for every school district. See the back cover for information regarding local liaisons.

ASSEMBLY BILL 167

Removes barriers to graduation by reducing the number of credits a student needs to graduate. The amount of credits are reduced to the state minimum requirements but only apply to youth who meet specific eligibility requirements related to school placement changes.

INDIAN CHILD WELFARE ACT (ICWA)

This important federal legislation was enacted in 1978 to address the high numbers of Native children and families being separated by state child welfare agencies.

Key facets of the law include: providing active efforts to keep families together; identifying out-of-home placements that fit under the ICWA preference provisions; and working actively to notify and involve the child's tribe and the child's parents in court proceedings even if a child is not an enrolled member (NICWA, 2019).

It is important to learn about ICWA specially when working with Native foster youth. For more information, visit <https://www.nicwa.org/about-icwa/><sup>3</sup>

CA ASSEMBLY BILL 12

AB 12 allows for foster care to be extended for youth past age 18, and up to age 21. Youth become "non-minor dependents" and continue to receive support while working to obtain educational and/or employment training opportunities. For more information, visit <http://www.cdss.ca.gov/inforesources/Foster-Care/Extended-Foster-Care-AB-12><sup>4</sup>

CA CHAFEE GRANT FOR FOSTER YOUTH

Youth in foster care for at least one day, between the ages of 16 and 18 as a dependent or ward of the court and have financial need, may qualify for up to $5,000 per year for career and technical training or college. For more information, eligibility and application forms, visit <https://www.chafee.csac.ca.gov/><sup>5</sup>
